

Your Guide...

...to colour coding for cleaning

Colour-coded cleaning is a proven hygiene system created by BICSc in the late 1990s and endorsed by the FSA since 2006. By separating equipment into four easy-to-identify colours it provides a simple, reliable way to prevent cross-contamination. Each colour is dedicated to a specific area, from washrooms and public spaces to bars, kitchens and food prep zones, helping teams work smarter, cleaner and with total confidence in their hygiene standards.

Red:

Used for cleaning washrooms and toilets. This color is designated for high-risk areas to prevent the spread of germs.

Blue:

Used for general areas such as restaurants and bars. This color is for lower-risk cleaning tasks.

Yellow:

Typically assigned to kitchens and food preparation areas. It helps ensure that food safety is maintained by using dedicated cleaning tools.

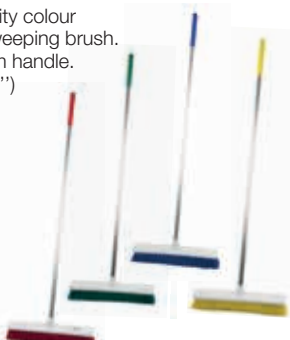

Green:

Assigned to public spaces like lobbies and hallways. It is used for cleaning areas that do not require the same level of hygiene as food preparation or washrooms.
